WRIGHT, Marjorie
October 8, 2006
There could never ever be another
Who could take the place of our wife and Mother
Her smile always shone so bright
Like a star that passed through the night.
It was very hard to say goodbye
When it was time to let her fly.
Your life ended oh so soon!
A star you are - up with the moon!
And to us you never did any wrongs
You always sang and wrote your songs
Our hearts are broken that you are gone
And to this day, we will never forget.
We miss and will remember you forever
Until the day we can fly together!
Love you Marj,
Mom and Grandmom
Sadly missed by
Her husband Emerson Wright
And her family

Final West Nile stats

During the 2007 West Nile Virus surveillance season, 1,036 mosquito batches were tested for the virus. Three mosquito batches tested positive. A total of 58 dead crows and blue jays were reported and those specimens suitable for testing were sent to the laboratory. Two birds tested positive in Peel this year. The mosquito and bird surveillance programs concluded on Sept. 30.

The stagnant water reporting program ended Aug. 31. Peel Public Health received 297 stagnant water reports from Peel residents this year.

There was one confirmed human case of WNV in Peel Region thus far in 2007. A female in her late teens living in Mississauga tested positive for WNV in August. It is unclear whether the disease was contracted locally or abroad.

The fourth and final round of roadside catch basin larviciding was completed on Sept. 1. The fourth round was indicated by a green dot on the catch basin grate.

Larviciding of catch basins in the green spaces of parks in Peel has been completed. The treatment of surface water sites on public lands also concluded Sept. 30.

The weather played a large role in WNV and since this September and early October have been warmer than usual, WNV is still a threat.

There were 77 WNV-positive birds reported in Ontario. In the regions neighbouring Peel, WNV-positive birds have been reported in York Region, Wellington-Dufferin-Guelph Health Unit, Halton Region, Toronto and Simcoe-Muskoka District Health Unit.

Fifty-one batches of mosquitoes have tested positive for WNV in Ontario - 17 in Toronto, 13 in Windsor-Essex, eight in Halton Region, four in Chatham-Kent, three in Hamilton, three in Peel Region, and one in each of Niagara, Northwestern Health Unit and Haldimand-Norfolk Health Unit.

Thirteen human cases of WNV infection were reported in Ontario.

WNV activity in Canada remains high in the western provinces. Manitoba has reported 948 positive batches of mosquitoes, 551 human cases and eight positive cases in horses.

Manitoba also reported three deaths associated with WNV. Saskatchewan reported 460 positive mosquito batches, 64 positive birds and 57 positive cases in horses. There were 477 confirmed human cases, with an additional 844 cases under investigation. Health officials in Saskatchewan report four deaths associated with WNV. Alberta has reported 223 positive mosquito batches, 291 human cases and 32 positive cases in horses. British Columbia has reported 16 positive human cases; however, all acquired the virus while travelling outside of the province.

Town's Progress Report available

The Town of Caledon officially launched its third annual Progress Report Oct. 3. This year's document highlights four key themes - community safety, recreation, development and environment. It also incorporates provincially-mandated information from the Municipal Performance Measurement Program and the Town's audited financial statements.

"The 2006-2007 Progress Report shows how municipal staff and council work together to ensure the things that are important to the Caledon community come to life," said Mayor Marolyn Morrison.

The 2006-2007 Progress Report highlights the Town of Caledon's commitment to maintaining high quality, effective service delivery. The annual Progress Report is one of several communication methods that mayor, council and staff utilize to inform Caledon residents and businesses about the Town's goals and achievements.

Copies of the 2006-2007 Progress Report are available at Town Hall, recreation facilities and library branches. A PDF version will also be posted at www.caledon.ca.
